Helpful information:

How to reach Riva del Garda:

Riva del Garda is located on the northern shore of the lake Garda and can be reached either via the north-south motorway route between Austria and Verona or the east-west Milan-Venice motorway putting it within reach of a variety of airports.

Travel by Car

Those heading to Riva del Garda from the west are advised to use the A4/E70 motorway which stretches from Venice to Milan. The exit for the lake – actually it is the one for Brescia Est - is situated to the east of the turn-offs for Brescia - the route then goes through countryside before joined the lakeshore road north to Limone and eventually to Riva.

Drivers coming from the north should exit the A22/E45 from the Austrian border at Rovereto Sud / Lago di Garda Nord and travel through the mountains to Torbole and Riva del Garda.

This is also the most promising route for those heading from the east and south, who should take the route to the north towards Austria after the exits for Verona and then leave the motorway at the Rovereto Sud junction as above.

Distances

Milan 177km - northeast to Bergamo and then past Brescia to the motorway exit at Brescia Est

Venice 204km - past Padua, Vicenza and Verona to the motorway exit at Rovereto Sud

Verona 86km - north on the motorway to Rovereto Sud

Riva del Garda, is well-served with airports, many of which - especially the most close at hand - are served with flights from the low-cost airlines. The largest and most likely to have convenient scheduled flights from further afield are Venice (Marco Polo) Airport and the two airports at Milan. Verona airport is the closest and very well connected to Frankfurt or Munich for those who travel by Lufthansa.

Distances

Verona Airport (on motorway interchange to south of city) - 90km

Bergamo Orio al Serio Airport (just outside Bergamo) - 130km

Milan Linate Airport (close to the city in the eastern suburbs) - 172km

Milan Malpensa Airport (to the west of the city) - 211km

Venice Marco Polo Airport (located on coast of Venice lagoon) - 206km
